The knight's courtship of his lady, consequently, will usually be secret, and beset with external difficulties, even if the lady is agreeable, which is not always the case, especially at the beginning. The romance will usually end with the marriage of the knight perhaps a joint marriage, together with some of his friends or relatives the birth or conception of a son, and the protagonist's accession to the throne. Women in need of assistance, ranging from queens to humble servant girls, are the basis for many of the knight's deeds. The protagonist will not resist the request to help such a deserving person. Adventures with the supernatural will also present themselves to the knight, though not in the sense the Quijote has given us to understand.
