The former views faith as closely coordinated with demonstrable truths; the latter more strictly as an act of the will of the religious believer. In the current environment we find our nation, if the Church, regardless of denomination, does not pull together in harmony, the forces of Satan, which are growing more bold every day, will rip the Church apart, leaving only a small remnant to greet Christ upon His return. But we've said enough. Pier Paolo Pasolini. Berkeley: University of California Press.

Shaft replies, "You're gonna have to close it yourself" then hangs up the phone. In fact, the conditional form of the conciliar statement, taken in its full force and in the light of the interventions of the Fathers who recommended it, reveals the unwillingness of the Council to approve the institution of establishment even as a matter of purely historic right. Winning the vote was more important than the instruction of the Word or following their leaders.
